HOW TO BUY FURNITURE.

Strange as it may seem, it is true, nevertheless, that the knowledge of the average person as to the quality and construction of Furniture is very limited. Being an average person myself I turned for information to an authority on the question, a member of the Brooklyn Furniture Co., who obligingly enlightened me.

Good workmanship and careful selection of materials are absolutely necessary in making tables. They are to be made of solid wood, and the legs or supports out of the way of the person using them. The top should be of a solid piece of wood, and not of glued-up boards. The drawers and doors should be made of solid wood, and not of veneer. The joints should be made of dovetail, and not of glue. The finish should be of a solid color, and not of a varnish that will wear off.

DOYLE'S RAID ON CANADA.

Simple Means That Gained a Scarce Victory.

Boston, Jan. 5. — The present talk of a Fenian invasion of Canada recalls the raid which old Dennis Doyle made upon the New Brunswick town of St. Stephen in 1867 and which filled the hotels and boarding houses of the town with refugees from the Fenian forces.

When the movement against Canada was started in various Northern States in that year, Doyle organized a band of his own and marched them to a place called Robbinston, with the intention of crossing to the Maine shore, there to meet the Fenian forces and restore the Fenian cause. His operations caused excitement all along the New Brunswick shore, and people began to desert their homes and flee to the American side for protection. It having been announced that the United States Government was to send troops to the Maine shore, Doyle decided to cross to the Maine shore and to meet the Fenian forces there.

Doyle's band of Fenians, which numbered about 100 men, crossed to the Maine shore on the night of January 1, 1867, and marched to the town of Robbinston. The Fenian forces were met by the Fenian forces, and a battle was fought. The Fenian forces were victorious, and the Fenian forces were driven back to the Maine shore.

The Fenian forces were driven back to the Maine shore, and the Fenian forces were driven back to the Maine shore. The Fenian forces were driven back to the Maine shore, and the Fenian forces were driven back to the Maine shore.

The Rev. Dr. Van Dyke III.

The Rev. Henry Van Dyke, the retiring pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, is confined to his bed at the house of friends in this city, by a general breaking down of his nervous system due to overwork. He left his home at Princeton, N. J., about a week ago, and, though he was sick and confined to his bed, he was still able to perform his duties as pastor of the church as usual. He was informed that he was growing steadily worse since that time. Dr. Van Dyke was to have preached at the Brick Church to-day.

A BEWILDERED HAVANA PORTER.

Unable to Comprehend American Ways of Treating the Women of One's Household.

HAVANA, Dec. 26.—With all the superficial gallantry toward the fair sex with which the Cuban and the Spanish are endowed, there is mixed a peculiar disregard and mistrust which, to say the least, is very strange to women or English ladies. This very week an American family had an experience which showed in a humorous way both the Spaniard's mistrust of women and the Cuban's sense of loyalty to his employer. When the household mistress was first established in Havana the good housewife, to the mind of the door-clerk, Spanish porter, was an interloper. When she ordered an afternoon porter to bring her a package, she was told to wait until the porter had finished his work. When she ordered a porter to bring her a package, she was told to wait until the porter had finished his work. GOOD DUCKING ON LONG ISLAND.

One Hunter Said to Have Killed Sixty Birds With a Double Shot.

EASTPORT, L. I., Jan. 6.—Sportsmen about this place are now enjoying some of the most successful duck shooting season which the East Bay has ever afforded. Thousands of wild fowls which were scattered over these waters before they froze, now resort to the few open air holes. Previous to the bay's freezing it was impossible to obtain a shot at the large flocks of birds which sat just out of range from the shore and beside the use of shot could not be decoyed sufficiently close to afford a shot.

Now, however, the ducks are concentrated at a few air holes and in order to kill them it is only necessary to drive them away from the shore and into the open water. The birds are first frightened away, and as they generally return by pairs and sing as they fly, the hunter can hear them and be able to kill nearly the whole flock. When the birds are first frightened from an air hole it is considered impossible to discharge a shot. The effect of shooting is to drive away many of the birds to fly away unharmed, but they will invariably return to the original locality.

Stories of killing phenomenal numbers of ducks at air-holes are told. One says that a local hunter recently killed sixty ducks with a double shot. The birds were concentrated in a small patch of water, were prevented from detecting the hunter's approach by a box of ice, and he was able to come within as close range as he desired. In shooting on many birds with one shot it is not to be supposed that they are all killed outright. On the contrary, more than two-thirds are on wing-tipped, necessitating their being shot a second time.

The wild fowls now composing the flocks in this vicinity are chiefly broad-bills. This variety, though not held in so high repute by the sportsmen as the red-heads and canvasbacks, is considered a particularly edible bird, and commands in the market an average price of fifty cents a pair.

During the season of the year when the presence of ice in the bay confines the ducks to a very small area where they are congregated, sportsmen are very fortunate in securing a large number of birds.

GAME IN MAINE IN 1899.

DEER PLentiful, Caribou Altogether Lacking, Moose Scarce.

Bowen, Me., Jan. 5.—The Fish and Game Commissioners of Maine say in their annual report that deer are as numerous as ever, while caribou have disappeared entirely from the State and there is a scarcity of mature bull moose. Cow moose and young bulls are plentiful, but the law forbids the killing of the cow at any season, and many of the young bulls come under the head of antelope and are also protected. The law allowing the shooting of deer in September, one deer to a hunter, is considered as food in the locality where shot, is regarded by the Commissioners as a considerable sum in game law. Last year 48,000 deer were shot, and the State gets a considerable sum in game law. Last year 48,000 deer were shot, and the State gets a considerable sum in game law.

There are in Maine 132 licensed sportsmen's camps, valued, with their equipment, at $1,000,000, and in 1899 they were visited by 1,012 persons.
